Law School Drive

Washington attorney Robert Amory Jr. has been appointed national chairman of a drive to raise $15 million for the Harvard Law School. The money, being raised for Harvard's Sesquicentennial in 1967, is to be used for new professorships, scholarships, research fellowships and buildings.

Amory heads a committee of 37 distinguished lawyers and businessmen involved in the Sesquicentennial effort. Other Washington members are W. John Kenney and Robert N. Miller.
